The image shows a screenshot of the Prezi.com registration page. The page has a header with the Prezi logo and navigation links: "Your prezis", "Learn", and "Explore". The main heading is "Registration". Under "Your details", there are input fields for "First name", "Last name", "Email", "Password", and "Password again". A red arrow points to each of these fields. Below the "Email" field, there is a note: "Please note: Your email will be your user name". To the right, under "You have chosen Public access", there are sections for "Public access is free" (with a list of benefits: "Create prezis from any computer online", "Download finished prezis and present offline", "Storage up to 100 MB of data") and "Limitations" (with a list of restrictions: "All your prezis will be published on Explore", "A small Prezi watermark will be shown on your prezis", "You can only create prezis online"). Below the registration form is a CAPTCHA section with the words "navest" and "Hudibras" and a "Refresh" button. At the bottom, there is a checkbox: "I understand that all my prezis will be published on prezi.com/Explore and I agree to the Terms of Use". A red arrow points to the "Register and Continue" button.
